Former Daily photographer wins Pulitzer

By Victor Manuel Inzunza
Daily staff writer

SJSU alumnus Kim Komenich was drenched in champagne within minutes after hearing he had won the Pulitzer Prize.

In fact, the San Francisco Examiner staff photographer Komenich and the Examiner photo room were awash with champagne and beer as the whole staff celebrated his victory Thursday.

Komenich, 30, is a former Spartan Daily staff photographer and photo editor, who graduated from SJSU in 1979.

The Pulitzer is the most prestigious award in journalism.

One of the first things Komenich did after hearing he had won the award was to call Joe Swan, his former photojournalism professor at SJSU.

"I can't believe it. I'm still stunned," said

Swan, adviser to the Spartan Daily photography staff.

Swan said he was in Turlock vacationing with his grandchildren when he received a telephone call from Komenich telling him he'd won the Pulitzer.

"I couldn't believe it. I was really flabbergasted," Swan said. "It is really nice to have your grads achieve."

Komenich won the spot news award for a series of photographs documenting the fall of Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos.

Komenich said Monday that he made five trips to the Philippines beginning in August 1984.

The 14-picture series portrayed the election and its aftermath, shot from January to March of 1986.

Komenich said the project was the product of three years of work by Examiner reporter Phil Bronstein.

"We knew something was going to happen. The Philippines has a bad reputation for elections and we knew it was time to get over there," Komenich said.

Komenich credited reporter Bronstein's many contacts in the Philippines which enabled them to land interviews with Marcos and his wife Imelda.

But Komenich said he was able to complete the reporting with photo essays that allowed Bronstein to write features on the situation in the Philippines.

"I was able to go to (the Philippines) and fill out the rough edges," Komenich said.

"When Phil would follow up leads that weren't photographable or wouldn't pan out, I'd go out and find out great photo essays that he could write on."

Komenich said that because of Bronstein's contacts they were able to be at places the rest of the press corps did not know about.

Swan said Komenich has asked him to accompany him to the award presentation in New York.

Komenich said he will be presented with the Pulitzer medal May 18 at Columbia University in New York City. He will also receive $1,000.

Swan said he plans to attend.

Swan said Komenich enjoys working on extended projects such as the Philippines assignment.

Komenich was part of an Examiner reporting team that spent about nine months in the Philippines during a three-year period.

"The Philippines story is a long-term project that somebody works on," Swan said. "You just don't go down there and take a few grab shots and win a Pulitzer Prize."

San Jose State Day at the Giants a 'fun outing' for more than 600

By Scott G. Hamilton
Daily staff writer

A spirited crowd of more than 600 SJSU students, employees and their friends and family members braved the frigid wind tunnel known as Candlestick Park Saturday to watch the San Francisco Giants pull out a 2-1 extra-inning win over the Atlanta Braves.

With temperatures hovering in the 50s and a sun that never reached the section where they were seated, the SJSU revelers foresook the comforts of more traditional spring break Shangri-Las.

But from the moment before the game when stadium announcer Jeffrey Bonds introduced President Gail Fullerton to the crowd of 24,043, the cheering from the hardy SJSU clan started and never let up.

Stepping up to a microphone on the infield turf before the game, Fullerton said it was a pleasure to take part in the fifth annual SJSU Day at the Park.

After a short address, Fullerton headed for a luxury box with an armful of flowers presented to her on field. Fullerton said the idea for the annual event got its impetus from Connie Lurie, SJSU alumna and wife of Giants owner Bob Lurie.

"It's just sort of a fun outing,"

SJSU sophomore Karen Derenzi and her sister Christine, a freshman at SJSU, went to the Giants game with their parents.

Fullerton said.

And fun it was, particularly for Lou Lucivero, stepfather of mechanical engineering senior Maureen Bell. The purchaser of 114 SJSU discount tickets, Lucivero was granted the opportunity to pitch and keep the first ball of the game.

"This is great, I'm still excited," he said moments after his debut on the mound.

When asked about the colossal number of his companions, Lucivero said they included friends, relatives, co-workers and even a couple of his enemies.

Lucivero wasn't the only dedicated fan in the SJSU section. Perched in the front row was Salvador Rodriguez, brother of Lupe Lopez, a project secretary in the Special Education Department.

Rodriguez said he often attends Giants home games and added that Lopez rounded up 17 members of his family for the outing because she knew he was a Giants fan.

"That's why they're here," he said, pointing to those around him.

Huddled near the back of the assembly was a group which was no less enthusiastic.

Freshman nursing major Christine Derenzi, her sister Karen, a journalism sophomore, their parents Ron and Marie, both alumni of 1964, and Dave Brady, a marketing senior, munched ballpark staples of hot dogs and peanuts and hollered throughout the game.

When the Giants fell behind in the seventh inning and chilling gusts prompted huddling among crowd members, Brady and the Derenzis shrugged both threats off.

"It's always cold here," Brady said. "But it's not as cold as it is at San Jose State when the heaters in the dorms are out."

"They won't lose," Karen Derenzi said, with a look of defiance in her eyes.

Three innings and much shivering later, her prophecy proved correct.

CSU denies union space at SJSU site

Credit union set to open at off-campus location

By David Barry
Daily staff writer

The Washington Square Federal Credit Union will finally be opening, but not on campus.

After its charter was approved in October, the credit union had its long-awaited request denied to open in the Associated Students Business Office.

The request was turned down April 8 by Mayer Chapman, general counsel to the California State University system, and John Hillyard, director of CSU business and auxiliary services, because it does not comply with a 1973 CSU board of trustees resolution, said Jean Lenart, an administrator in the A.S. business office.

Instead, the credit union will be opening Thursday on the first floor of the University Club, said Mike McLennan, credit union chairman.

The University Club is located at Eighth and San Salvador streets.

According to the resolution, "banking services provided on campus should be available for all student, staff and organizations of the college community."

The credit union allows students, faculty and alumni to use its services, McLennan said. However, faculty are not allowed to be voting members or to have the same privileges as students and alumni, he said.

The main reason for not allowing faculty and staff to be voting members is that they can belong to the California State Employee Credit Union No. 9, McLennan said.

The National Credit Union Administration, which oversees college credit unions, does not allow members of one credit union to be voting members of another, he said.

The only way around the rule would be for the California State Employee Credit Union to write a letter to the NCUA releasing their members to be a part of the Washington Square Federal Credit Union.

"Credit unions are not supposed to compete," McLennan said. "There is supposed to be a family atmosphere and they are supposed to work together."

Members of the credit union had hoped that Hillyard and Chapman would declare that the credit union was not a banking service and would not fall under the resolution.

McLennan, A.S. President Tom Boothe and WSFCU President Nigel Murtagh will appear before the trustees in July to seek an exemption to open in the business office.

'Credit unions are not supposed to compete.

There is supposed to be a family atmosphere.'

— Michael McLennan, credit union chairman

The credit union currently has the support of President Gail Fullerton, the Academic Senate, the A.S., the California State Employees Credit Union, and the Municipal Employees Credit Union of San Jose Inc., according to an Academic Senate resolution introduced by Boothe. The credit union is also seeking support of the California State Student Association.

"We want the trustees to address the credit union by themselves and grant an exception," McLennan said. "The purpose of the credit union is to provide services."

Until then, the credit union will operate in the University Club. The credit union will open its doors Thursday from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m. for its 30 current members and anyone interested, Murtagh said.

It will be open Monday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. and Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., he said.

The grand opening is slated for May 6, McLennan said.

The University Club will be a temporary location, he said. The credit union, which has over $200,000 in assets, will be paying $230 a month to rent the space in the club. The credit union would have paid $120 a month for the space in the business office.

"We won't get the foot traffic we would get for the business office," said Rose.

However, Murtagh and McLennan did not think the location would have a great effect on business.

"We will be setting up tables like the Sears Savings Bank does in front of the student union," said McLennan.

Fire sends smoke plume towering over campus

By David Barry and Mark Foyer
Daily staff writers

A "not unexpected" four-alarm fire broke out Monday at 6 p.m. in an auto body shop near campus on the corner of Pierce and Market streets.

The fire, which was started when an automobile frame straightener machine was used to remove a gas tank from a car. A leak developed and apparently met with a spark produced by the machine, causing the fire, said Capt. Dennis Madigan, information officer for the San Jose Fire Department.

The fire sent a towering cloud of black smoke that spiraled into the blue sky high above downtown San Jose and the SJSU campus.

The building, valued at $1.6 million, contains other businesses, including a supply shop and other automotive businesses.

Damage is estimated at $800,000, including $700,000 for the structure and $100,000 for the contents of the building.

Madigan said one person was treated for smoke inhalation, another had

Budget committee wants to ban spending A.S. funds on alcohol

By David Barry
Daily staff writer

A stipulation in the A.S. budget committee's proposed 1987-88 budget would not allow A.S. funds to be used for the purchase of alcohol.

The stipulation, along with the budget — which will be taken from the recommendations from the budget committee and Associated Students President Tom Boothe — will be decided by the A.S. board of directors at its next meeting, scheduled for Wednesday.

The budget committee recommended the stipulation to protect the A.S. from liability for alcohol-related lawsuits, said Teri Cooper, committee member and A.S. director of sponsored programs.

However, Cooper did not want the action of the budget committee misinterpreted.

"We're not disapproving of alcohol," she said. "The most important thing is that we don't want to be liable for an injury or a death."

The question of liability was raised when the rugby club came before the committee. The club, which receives money from the A.S., uses alcohol at its games. "We weren't singling them out. We just don't want the A.S. liable for an accident," Cooper said. The stipulation does not prevent alcohol from being served at the activities.

A.S. members should not turn lobbyist

The Associated Students Board of Directors needs to take action prohibiting former board members from lobbying for funds from members they served with.

The most recent example of this is lobbying by former A.S. Controller Gabriel Miramontes, who resigned from that position earlier this semester. Since then, he successfully lobbied the A.S. special allocations committee on behalf of the Chicana Alliance, a women's Hispanic group, for $2,155. During his term of office Miramontes was in charge of the special allocations committee. He should not be in a situation where he can obtain funds from his former fellow board members.

Miramontes knows the inner workings of the A.S. allocation process, because he was in the position to allocate money himself. He is an expert, as he was elected to the office of controller for two consecutive terms.

These are the very reasons why Miramontes should not be lobbying at all. He has connections and influence — just by virtue of the fact he once held office with the very people he is trying to get money from. The A.S.

board of directors could be partial toward Miramontes, or any other former board member, because of past association.

The A.S. should not let this activity continue. Although Miramontes has no connection with the group he lobbied for, the principle of not allowing former members to lobby for funds should be adhered to.

This can be compared to the situation with Michael Deaver and the federal government. Deaver once served as an aid to President Reagan. After he left his position he started his own professional lobbying firm, and is now being investigated for illegally using his influence in Washington to make money. Congress passed legislation to curb this kind of activity, and the A.S. should do the same.

The A.S. should adopt a rule stating that any member of the A.S. board of directors who resigns during a term of office can't lobby for A.S. funds while the board he served on is still in office.

Granted, the effects at SJSU will not be as large-scale as the ones in Washington, but the principle with student money is the same.

Lesson of Len Bias' death forgotten

It has been almost 10 months since University of Maryland All-American basketball player Len Bias died of a heart attack induced by cocaine usage. After his death, many felt that drug abuse would decline. They said that drug testing could have saved Bias' life.

But drug abuse hasn't decreased. Drug testing won't stop athletes from taking drugs. They'll keep on taking drugs. Just check what has happened in the months following Bias' death.

Don Rogers, a Cleveland Brown defensive back, died after taking cocaine at his own bachelor party. His death occurred 10 days after Bias died. Said one player after Rogers' death: "I was suppose to be an usher at his wedding. Instead, I'm going to be a pallbearer at his funeral."

Quarterback Tony Robinson and fullback B.B. Cooper, both from the University of Tennessee, are serving one-year jail sentences for cocaine trafficking.

The National Basketball Association suspended Houston Rockets players Lewis Lloyd and Mitchell Wiggins after the two failed drug tests.

Golden State Warrior rookie Chris Washburn checked himself into a drug treatment center for a cocaine problem.

Vida Blue, who had just signed a contract with the Oakland Athletics, retired from baseball after failing a drug test. Blue was suspended from the major leagues in 1984 after spending time in prison for drug possession while playing for the Kansas City Royals.

Dwight Gooden, the New York Mets' ace pitcher, checked himself into a drug treatment center after confessing to a problem with cocaine.

Eddie Milner, a San Francisco Giants outfielder, checked himself into a clinic for dependency on an unnamed drug.

The Phoenix Suns of the NBA were rocked by two separate drug scandals last week. Walter Davis, an all-star guard for the Suns, re-entered a drug treatment center after having a relapse of cocaine abuse. Davis spent 30 days in a treatment center in 1986. In a related incident, also last week, three current members of the Suns and two former players were indicted on drug trafficking charges.

In March the nation was shocked by the story of Gary McLain. McLain, a point guard who led Villanova University to a basketball championship in 1985, told, in a Sports Illustrated article, of his usage of drugs while he played for the Wildcats. McLain said he got high on cocaine the day Bias died. He talked of how he was on cocaine while playing in the 1985 semifinal game against Memphis State University, and a few weeks later while he was at a reception at the White House.

There has been talk that drug testing could have prevented many of these incidents from happening. This isn't true. For as long as there are professional athletes who have extra money to spend, there will be drug dealers waiting to sell these athletes drugs.

What is needed is more education on the dangers of drugs. Athletes have to be shown that drugs won't make them play better or feel better. Professional sports have tried to educate athletes on the dangers. The National Football League, Major League Baseball and the NBA all have launched drug education programs.

But in the end, players will still buy drugs. The rookies, who are making big bucks for the first time in life, have extra money and don't know how to spend it. Along with come the drug dealers who tell the athletes that drugs will be good for them. And quickly, the money is spent.

And with it will come the stories about athletes who will enter drug treatment centers, be arrested for drug charges or die of drug overdoses.

In his essay at the end of 1986, Sports Illustrated columnist Frank Deford said Bias' 1987 resolution should be to be remembered for how he died. If people remember this, then his death might not be in vain.

Unfortunately, people have forgotten what killed Bias. One has to wonder what might have been if Bias had lived. Would he have been a superstar for the Boston Celtics, as some have claimed? Or would he have ended up in a drug-treatment center like fellow-top-draft-choice Washburn? We'll never know.

Female clergy can serve God too

In the United States, about 8,000 ordained women are able to perform religious ceremonies in the two main religions — Christianity and Judaism. Three groups which don't allow women priests or rabbis are the Roman Catholics, sections of the Eastern Orthodox Church and Orthodox Jews.

From the beginning of their instruction, Roman Catholic girls are taught they can't be priests. Women who feel a calling from God are told they can be nuns, but that is an insult and a poor substitute for ordination. Nuns are respected within the religious world, but are not able to dispense sacraments which is very important in the church.

In fact, the big joke within the Catholic community is that nuns really control the private schools instead of the priests.

The fact that nuns do support and maintain many worthwhile services is not the point. If a man does not want to be a priest he can be a deacon or a brother. Women have basically one option — though the Catholic Church does allow women to be Eucharistic ministers now.

Because religious organizations prohibit women priests and rabbis, many will become frustrated or eventually leave the religious organization.

In an article in an April issue of Insight magazine, the Rev. Jacques Boissiere, an Episcopal priest, said women preachers he has watched are "dedicated and excellent preachers who go straight to the point while male preachers often lose themselves in abstractions."

He then said problems occur when women priests fall in love because females are more emotional than males and this may damage their ministry.

Leontine T.C. Kelly, a United Methodist bishop, insists women clergy can teach male religious leaders and married couples a different kind of ministry. She said in an article in Insight that women clergy don't think of the ministry as a way to define themselves. Because women don't regard their role within the ministry as a profession, it's all right for them to admit their mistakes. In these ways, women clergy create a more approachable image and God knows all of the major religions need help in this area.

No church or synagogue is enriched by members who feel ignored, confused or insulted. Their message is "women may be good for some roles in religious circles, but they aren't good enough to be powerful messengers of God."

The reasons women want to be priests or rabbis don't differ from those of men. No matter who an individual is, a call to serve God should depend on the person's ability to act with faith as a leader in the community.

Deborah G. Guadan

One's sex determines many things in our society such as gender roles and job abilities. Faith is a gift from God not a way to further degenerate women's spirituality.

Half-jokingly, a woman tells a friend she would become a priest if her religion allowed it and approved of married priests. What she wants is to develop the feminine spirit within organized and male-dominated religions.

After the development of patriarchal societies, groups who dedicated themselves to female deities gradually faded out. Religious leaders today say the Bible validates the exclusion of women as clergy. Most leaders of organized religions fail to remember, or at least mention, that the pre-historic religion of the Creatress, which focused on the nurturing and creative forces of the universe. The female spirit dominated this religion, but the only people who are taught this are religion and women's studies' students.

Women gain strength from strong role models. Active members of religious organizations develop a stronger faith with a diverse education. By admitting women clergy, religious organizations will benefit because more females will fulfill their spiritual needs.

Before records were kept and religious hierarchies were organized, women held positions of respect and fulfillment. They were leaders in their communities. Women clergy want to offer change, not the destruction of ancient traditions. Our society has supposedly progressed since pre-historic times. In stead of staying in one place and denying women clergy the chance to actively pursue their call to faith, let them serve God and not male ego.

Provide foreign-language tapes

Editor,
I am writing about the April 6 article titled "Minority Education Upgrade is Crucial."

I have read part of Amado Padilla's speech. To some extent I agree with him that "if a student does not have lessons in his own language, he may fall behind." There are students at SJSU, including myself, who use English as a second language.

However, there are many of us who lack proficiency in English, and I believe we can be helped considerably if provided with tapes in our native languages explaining the concepts of certain courses. For example, in Biology 10, a friend often seeks help from me for interpretation. I, in turn, may ask for help from others. Biology 10 is an introductory course to science and students need to comprehend the fundamental concepts to advance to higher courses.

Although there are those who can speak, write, and read English well, there are times when they don't understand everything the professors say. Just imagine that 25 percent of students can't even understand the language. What will become of those of us who are not proficient in English?

Having tapes in our native languages explaining the concepts may be a small step toward the enhancement of education, but it is a step that will lead to a more enriched and meaningful life for us. We would be well-educated individuals who speak English as a second language.

Break the stagnation of boredom

Editor,
I'm writing in response to Lisa Bobadilla's April 6 Viewpoint, titled "It's Possible to Remove Stagnation, Boredom from Life." I'd like to thank her for having written such a fundamental yet thoughtful piece.

It has been such a long time since I read an article about boredom and stagnation. Nowadays, people tend to follow the crowd and have the same belief as a group — which isn't bad at all if one is still concerned about him or herself once in a while. But being a little individualistic would bring people control over their lives.

Personally, I have just confronted boredom in my first year at SJSU. I used to have lunches and dinners at the same place every day. Finally, I came to the point that I didn't care what I ate as long as I had something in my stomach.

Bobadilla has shown the effects of being bored and stagnating, which in serious cases, can lead to suicidal tendencies. It's fascinating to know that boredom from daily life could pile up and cause a person to make a fatal decision. I hope that many other readers have gotten the same message from the piece as I have.

Publish student-help programs

Editor,
I would like to compliment you on a job well done for the Spartan Daily, but I do have a few questions. As an SJSU student, I am faced with many difficult tasks and responsibilities, such as carrying a full load, staying up late at night to prepare for exams, trying to hold down a full-time job, and so on.

My question is why doesn't the Daily publish all of the many student-improvement programs available to SJSU students? Yes, I know there are plenty of posters around campus, but I feel a majority of SJSU students rely on the Daily for campus information. I really believe that students, freshmen especially, need information about what programs and opportunities are available.

I know that everyone on the Daily staff is trying to do a good job, but I believe strongly in this issue. The most important goal for SJSU students is to become better individuals, and you can help by publishing news of the various programs, tutorials, mentors, inspirational seminars and the like.

Constitution celebration

Throwing a party without any trouble is tough work. Sometimes the problems are not worth having one at all.

But Americans are truly party animals, and when there is an reason to celebrate, Americans party zealously, despite the odds. It doesn't matter what the celebration really means, just as long as it's wild and crazy.

First was the corporation-funded Statue of Liberty extravaganza last year that many doubted would be successful. And there are the problem-plagued plans for the Golden Gate Bridge birthday hoopla next month.

Following in this new tradition of controversial celebrations is the festival of the United States Constitution.

The party in Philadelphia marking the 200th anniversary of the document that serves as a foundation of this country's basic beliefs and ideals is having its share of headaches.

Judging from the problems the hosts face, perhaps they should send out cards stating, "The party has been canceled."

We the People 200, organizers of the planned six-month festival, have only raised half of the $20 million needed for the extravaganza, which is scheduled to begin in five weeks, according to an article in the Chicago Tribune.

Not only has the agency had internal problems leading to the resignation of its chairman earlier this month, but the plans for the party are simply not falling into place.

"The same problem underlines everything," said a Philadelphia civic leader. "How do you celebrate an idea?"

The answer: not with a lot of useless hoopla. Something as important as the anniversary of the U.S. Constitution should be celebrated, but with dignity. Fun and games are fine for family picnics, but in the spirit of the constitution, the celebration should be more educational and inspiring.

We the People 200 plans, if all goes well, that the festival will include more than 200 events — including parades, concerts, seminars, tours, a hot-air-balloon race, a political humor conference, a symbolic congressional session and President Reagan and other legislative leaders leading what organizers say will be the largest parade in U.S. history.

Despite the patriotic theme, the RSVP answers so far have not been favorable.

Chrysler Corp. withdrew its commitment for a $2 million contribution. The Commission of the Bicentennial of the United States Constitution, a federal agency chaired by former Supreme Court Justice Warren Burger, also turned down a request of the same amount.

"No shows" also include a meeting of the Supreme Court in Philadelphia and a full congressional joint session. To top it all, former President Gerald Ford and former House of Representatives Speaker Thomas O'Neil declined invitations to be the national spokesperson for the festival.

Instead of spending so much time and money for yet another overblown party, We the People 200 should have focused on educating the public more about the U.S. Constitution. The document has lasted 200 years, and the public deserves to be reminded of the role the U.S. Constitution plays in our lives.

A big parade, a hot-air-balloon race and music concerts shouldn't be top priorities during this historic celebration. Such activities would only clash with the meaning of the U.S. Constitution: a democratic society based on individual freedoms.

While Americans wait to see if We the People 200 can scramble and round up the other $10 million for the celebration, maybe someone will realize the celebration misses the point of the U.S. Constitution and it is just too expensive.

Spartan Daily sweeps college press awards

By Deborah J. Kaplan
Daily staff writer

The Spartan Daily won the California Intercollegiate Press Association sweepstakes at the 1987 CIPA convention April 10 and 11 at the San Jose Hyatt Hotel.

The SJSU newspaper won the sweepstakes by accumulating 35 points in various categories. California State University at Fullerton's Daily Titan followed with 26 points.

The Spartan Daily's awards include second place for best newspaper special section and first and second for the best newspaper news section. The Daily won both first and third place for best overall design.

Tyrone van Hooydonk and Carl Scarbrough took first and third places respectively for front page layout. Scarbrough also took third place for the best news article.

David Rickard and Veda Anderson won best news series, taking first and second place, respectively. The third place award for the best human interest article, feature went to Brian Fedrow. Andy Bird won third place for best editorial.

Angelo Lopez won third place for his editorial cartoon, and Andrew Hamm and Lynn Louie placed second for best opinion section. David Wenstrom won third for best humor column. Roger Gilbert won third for best sports news article.

Erol Gurian took first in best news photograph and Ken Lam won for best news photographic essay.

SJSU's radio and television news programs also took a number of awards, including: Lucrezia La Russa won first place best radio news story; and Olaf Skuladottir, Dabra Burris and Cecil Houston for their first place winning radio documentary "World of the Blind."

Debra Peterson, Kathy Lowe and Elizabeth Camplone took second in that category with their piece entitled "Who are Our Homeless."

Best radio sports story went to Chuck Malany. Mark Reeves won best radio in-house announcement with his entry "Music M."

First place for best television newscast went to Debra Clark, and Chris Penn won first for best television sports story for his "Champions" entry; an honorable mention was given to Jim Bunner for "Telford."

Erol Gurian won first place for Best Magazine Color Photograph for Access and Dave Zarick won an honorable mention for his magazine illustration, also for Access.

Wahlquist construction may alleviate registration process

By Gene C. Johnson Jr.
Daily staff writer

Once renovation of Wahlquist Library is completed, students will be able to register and pay for their university fees in one building as opposed to current procedure where students are required to go to several sites to complete registration.

Not only will construction affect registration, but the university is in the process of relocating departments and services.

After renovation, Admissions and Records will move to Wahlquist Library Central with the financial aid business office and the cashier's office moving to the first floor of Wahlquist Library South, said Peggy Asuncion, facilities planning manager.

Bids will be placed today with the lowest bidding contractor evaluated by the California State University Chancellor's Office, she said.

Construction will begin in the next couple of months and will cost an estimated $1.4 million, she said.

The chancellor's office will select the contractor and finalize a completion date, she said.

The summer of 1988 completion date has been tentatively set on preliminary plans, Asuncion said.

"Students will only have to go between Wahlquist South and Wahlquist Central to do their enrollment and registration," Asuncion said.

"(Admissions and Records) will have much better student filing areas," she said. "They simply don't have the room to do that now."

Electronic, heating, cooling, and ventilation upgrades will be some of the renovations for Wahlquist, Asuncion said.

The interior of Wahlquist is the most important aspect of the remodeling process.

"(The interior) will appear much like a bank setting," she said.

After renovation, the university library will occupy all six floors of the library's northern wing with the first floor for the Reserve Bookroom, she said.

The second floor of Wahlquist Central will continue to house the Student Outreach, Equal Opportunity and General Education Advisement programs.

The third floor of Wahlquist Central will house the business affairs office for the campus, she said.

The building renovation is a part of the Major Capital Outlay Program to renovate all three portions of Wahlquist Library and to secure library functions in the Northern Wing of Wahlquist Library, she said.

Wahlquist will also temporarily house the Journalism and Mass Communications Department as a result of the renovation of Dwight Bentel Hall, she said.

The department will be moving in the summer of 1988 and will stay for the duration of the renovation, which will take about 18 months to complete, Asuncion said.

"If anybody goes through (Dwight Bentel Hall), it's obvious," she said. "The plywood supports on the ceiling were not intended to be permanent fixes."

Some of the functional problems of Dwight Bentel Hall include inadequate electrical supply, plumbing and ventilation, she said.

"There are a lot of things that the (Journalism and Mass Communications Department) are doing now that could be better served with a better building."

Asuncion also said facilities and planning will submit plans to the chancellor's office in May in regards to the renovation of the Administration Building.

Computer conference provides network for ideas

By Rosa Tong
Daily staff writer

Computers have revolutionized education to the extent that students and instructors may feel handicapped without the machines.

Keeping up with daily advancements in computer technology, the California Educational Computing Consortium, a group of "computer avids" from colleges and universities around the state, organizes a yearly workshop and conference focusing on computer applications in education.

This year, SJSU hosted the workshop held on April 9 and 10.

With the advent of the personal computer and easy operating instructions, almost every discipline has uses for the computer, said Al Leidy, chairman of the consortium.

"The objective of a computer is to use them as a tool in different fields — from raising a child, to sports, to science," said Judah Rosenwald, director of Extended Education's division of Fiscal and Computing Services at San Francisco State University.

The conference consisted of 46 sessions, with topics ranging from the elementary to the most sophisticated. Among the topics were: introduction to personal computers, application for commercial software packages, programs in several computer languages, application for computer graphics, artificial intelligence, and microcomputing in the future.

Most of the sessions were presented by SJSU faculty. Also conducting the sessions were representatives from DeAnza and Hartnell colleges and the University of California at Santa Cruz.

Private industries sent experts to demonstrate products and lecture on the use of personal computers. Tours of Hewlett-Packard Corporation and Tandem Computers Inc. were also included in the program.

Approximately 155 people attended the conference and although most of the attendees were faculty members from colleges and universities around the state, about 30 students signed up for the

WWII internment case panned

Dateline

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration said Monday the World War II detention of Japanese-Americans in U.S. prison camps shamed the nation, but it still urged the Supreme Court to kill a lawsuit stemming from the internment.

Solicitor General Charles Fried, the administration's top-ranking courtroom lawyer, argued that "ordinary rules of law" should apply to the lawsuit "no matter how much balm we would like to apply to the wound."

He said a 1983 suit, which seeks compensation for property losses suffered by those imprisoned, was filed in the wrong federal court and was filed too late.

But Fried also used the administration's strongest language to date in condemning the internment, in which 120,000 U.S. citizens and resident aliens of Japanese ancestry were taken from their homes and put in concentration camps for up to four years.

He called the banishment "a deplorable episode," adding, "The allies did not always adhere to the values for which they were fighting."

A federal appeals court ruled that the government must defend itself at trial against the property-loss claims, estimated in the billions of dollars. The Supreme Court's decision is expected by July.

After the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor in 1941, the federal government forcibly removed from their homes Japanese-Americans and Japanese citizens living in California and parts of Oregon, Washington and Arizona.

Trade delegate defends tariffs

OISO, Japan (AP) — New U.S. tariffs on some Japanese products should not affect the over-all relationship between the two allies, American trade representative Clayton Yeutter said Monday.

He said imposition of the duties last Saturday was not a protectionist act and the U.S. trade deficit will not be eliminated by solving individual issues, but he urged Japan to increase imports and drop quotas on foreign goods "as a matter of principle."

Yeutter said the new tariffs imposed by the Reagan administration represent "a relatively small blip ... on the screen of economic relationships between the two countries" and should not be permitted "to cloud the much more important economic and political relationship."

Yeutter spoke at a privately organized meeting of Japanese and U.S. government and business leaders at Oiso, a seaside city southwest of Tokyo.

He arrived Sunday, a day after the United States imposed tariffs worth $300 million on selected Japanese goods in retaliation for Japan's alleged violation of a 7-month-old agreement on trade in semiconductors.

Washington accused Japan of selling computer chips at unfairly low prices in third countries and of failing to open its semiconductor market sufficiently to American products.

Japan denied the charges and has asked the United States for consultations under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

Earlier Monday, Yeutter told Foreign Minister Tadashi Kuranari that Japan's stimulation of its domestic market has been "insufficient" and declared: "Frankly speaking, we need action rather than debate."

The United States wants Japan to stimulate its domestic economy so the market for both foreign and Japanese products will expand.

Computer standards proposed

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A bill to order the state to finish a study on whether there should be healthy and safety standards for computer terminals by next year was approved by the state Assembly on Monday.

The bill, AB348 by Assemblywoman Sally Tanner, D-El Monte, was sent to the Senate by a 61-4 vote with no debate.

The Standards Board of the California Occupational Safety and Health Administration last August ordered the Division of Occupational Safety and Health to conduct a study on whether the state should have standards for workers who spend hours in front of computer terminals.

Unions representing such workers claim the video display terminals, or VDTs, cause problems such as eye and back pains.

The Legislature last year passed a bill requiring such a study, but Gov. George Deukmejian vetoed it because he said the Standards Board had already ordered the study.

Alaskan oil drilling explored

WASHINGTON (AP) — Citing benefits to national security from possibly vast pools of oil to be found, Interior Secretary Donald P. Hodel recommended Monday that Congress open an Alaskan wildlife refuge to oil drilling.

The recommendation to open 1.5 million acres of the 19 million-acre Arctic National Wildlife Refuge on the Arctic Ocean along the Yukon border was no surprise. Hodel, a former energy secretary, has long sought ways to increase domestic oil and gas production.

But he will likely face long odds in getting Congress to approve his recommendation.

Hodel said he firmly believed the successful development of the Prudhoe Bay field 100 miles to the west of the refuge showed that "oil and gas activities can be conducted on the coastal plain of the arctic refuge in a manner consistent with the need to conserve the area's environmental and wildlife values."

The chief environmental threat has been seen as disturbance to preferred calving grounds of the 160,000-strong Porcupine caribou herd.

Church runs out of chances

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court refused Monday to continue sparing the Church of Scientology of California, loser of a $30 million lawsuit, from having to post an appeal bond that may bankrupt it.

The justices, without comment, let stand state court rulings that the church must pay either a $60 million cash bond or a $45 million surety bond while appealing former Scientologyist Larry Wollersheim's $30 million victory.

The high court last Nov. 3 had postponed the effect of the state court rulings until it studied the church's formal appeal.

Wollersheim, a Scientologyist for 11 years, said church members harassed him and tried to drive his novelty business into bankruptcy. Scientology officials denied the charges, but a jury in Los Angeles ruled for Wollersheim.

Under California law, the church was required to post a bond either two or 1½ times as large as the jury award while appealing.

SJSU women win PCAA Championship by 30 strokes

By Stephen Ellison
Daily staff writer

They must have been holding something back.

Not once during the 1986-87 season had the SJSU women's golf team dominated a tournament in such a way as they did this past weekend at the PCAA Championships in San Diego.

Golf

Although the Spartans had a three-stroke lead after the first round, Coach Mark Gale was convinced that they weren't playing up to their potential and admitted that he was a bit concerned going into the second round.

But the pattern was all too familiar. First the rocky start, then the strong finish.

There certainly was no question as to whether or not the Spartans would win the conference title, even though they were coming off a disappointing ninth-place finish at the Lady Sun Devil. But the margin of victory was somewhat of a surprise.

SJSU glided to the PCAA title with a second-round score of 286, an all-time low for the team. The Spartans turned their first-round, three-stroke lead into a 30-stroke victory over San Diego State, 601-631.

"We went into San Diego knowing we had to win," Gale said. "In the first round we were uptight and not playing too well. But the second round was the best round we've had here in 10 years."

"We ended the season on a high note. It would have been much more difficult entering the Nationals after finishing ninth in a tournament."

The team's second-round score was highlighted by Julie Ralls' three-under-par 69, which tied a course record. Ralls finished second individually with a 150 in the two rounds.

"Julie's dad showed up for the three rounds in Phoenix and then watched the first round of this tournament," Gale said. "After that he told Julie if she breaks 70 — gets into the 60-range — she'll get a thousand bucks. So she's cleaning up."

All five Spartans finished in the Top 10, including Dana Lofland, who won the conference individual title with a 146. She was also honored as PCAA Player of the Year.

Gale was named PCAA Coach of the Year.

"It's certainly an honor to be picked by fellow coaches," Gale said. "Whenever your peers select you as the best among them, it's really an honor."

"I think you should be selected not just for coaching, but for what you present to women's golf. My computerized statistics and ability to have the tournament results just minutes after it's over is unprecedented."

Gale felt Lofland was certainly deserving of her award and he is very optimistic of her being selected as an All-American.

Lisa Ipkendanz finished third in the tournament with a 151. Anne Jones finished sixth at 156 and Nancy Brown shot a 159, good enough to tie her for 10th.

The Spartans now have four weeks to prepare for the NCAA Championships to be held May 24-27 in Albuquerque, N.M.

Gale said three of the weeks will be for preparation. The women will get a week off for final exams.

"I think we'll be able to carry the momentum into the Nationals," Gale said. "Being both mentally prepared and physically prepared will give us a good shot."

Spartans win UCSB series

Team hosts fourth-ranked Stanford today

By Mark Foyer
Daily staff writer

Sooner or later, SJSU baseball coach Sam Piraro felt the Spartans might be able to get a few breaks. In defeating UC Santa Barbara two out of three over the weekend, the breaks finally went their way.

In the process, SJSU improved its record to 6-6 in the PCAA, 27-19 overall.

Baseball

In Saturday's 3-2 come-from-behind win, the Spartans got fine pitching from Anthony Telford, sound defense, timely hitting and a few breaks. Friday, they scored two runs in the bottom of the 10th inning to pull out a 7-6 win. The Gauchos won Thursday's game 6-4.

Trailing 2-1 heading into the bottom of the eighth in Saturday's game, SJSU infielder Ferando Viera led off with a single and Bob Straight pinch ran. Then on a 3-2 count, Rick Anderson was hit by a pitch.

Todd Eagen followed with a bunt down the third base line. The third baseman's throw was wide and Straight scored, with Anderson going to third. He scored the go-ahead run moments later on a wild pitch.

"The bunt made things happen for us," Piraro said. "I would like to have scored an insurance run, but I felt comfortable the way Telford was pitching."

Telford retired the side in order in the ninth to nail down the win.

"Tony made the big pitches when he had to," Piraro said. "To hold Santa Barbara to just two runs is a tremendous accomplishment."

Telford gave up two runs on seven hits, struck out eight and walked three.

He got help from his defense, namely Eagen in right field. Twice, Eagen made diving catches to take extra base hits away.

In the fourth, Eagen took an extra base hit away from Erik Johnson by diving at the last minute to catch Johnson's hit. Had Eagen missed, Johnson probably would have gone for extra bases.

"I got on my toes as soon as Johnson hit the ball," Eagen said. "I caught it with both hands to make sure the ball didn't pop out of my glove."

Then in the eighth with the Gauchos holding a 2-1 lead, they had runners on second and first with one out and Johnson at bat again. Johnson, who was two-for-three at that point, hit one into the gap in right-center.

"I got a good enough angle on the ball in order to have a chance to catch it," Eagen said. "I went for it all the way. I knew that if I didn't catch it, it would be a double and two runs. That might have won the game for them."

In Friday's game, the Spartans spotted the Gauchos a 5-1 lead heading into the home half of the seventh. Then with two outs and the bases empty, Mike Haruff, who went three-for-four with two runs scored, singled. Hewitt walked. Johnny Dellinger ran for Hewitt. Pinch hitter Greg Banda doubled to the corner in right, scoring Haruff.

After a walk loaded the bases, Viera singled to center to drive in two runs making the score 5-4.

The Spartans tied the score in the ninth as Eagen, pinch hitting, led off the inning with a single. He moved to second as the left fielder bobbled the ball.

Monte Brooks then singled to right moving Eagen to third. He scored moments later on Viera's sacrifice fly.

The Gauchos took the lead in the 10th as Quinn Mack's single scored Joe Kemp. Mack was out attempting to stretch his single into a double.

But in the bottom of the inning, SJSU won the game, scoring two runs on two hits and three walks.

Tom Hutler led off the inning with a single. Rob Thomas ran for Hutler, and scored moments later on Vince Latham's double.

The Santa Barbara pitcher then walked three consecutive Spartans, culminating with Eric Yamasaki's on four pitches which scored Latham with the winning run.

"I'm not overly excited to get the three hits," Haruff said. "I'm more excited about getting the win."

The Spartans lost three straight prior to the start of the Santa Barbara series. They lost a non-league game to Sonoma State 3-2 last Tuesday. Before that, they dropped two of three to Pacific, winning the first game 4-1, then losing 4-0 and 12-1.

Today, SJSU hosts fourth-ranked Stanford at 1 p.m. The two teams have met three times this year, with the Cardinal having won in two of those meetings.

The two teams met last on March 23 at Stanford. The Cardinal defeated the Spartans 5-3, rallying for four runs in the seventh to get the win.

Ruben Amaro's three-run home run highlighted the four-run rally.

Haruff led the Spartans with two hits, including a run-scoring single.

Neighbors say fire was no big surprise

major burns and a third had minor burns and a broken thumb.
San Jose city officials, according to resident Scott Mathieson — who lives across the street from the shop — have been attempting to close the shop for the past month because of outstanding violations involving material storage.
"It looks like they may have closed themselves down," Mathieson said.
Madigan was unsure if the city was trying to close the shop down.
The blaze was contained at approximately 7 p.m. Traffic was blocked by San Jose Police on Market Street between Viola and Reed streets.
Mathieson said he also saw one person in flames.
"I looked out and saw three men coming out of the shop. Two were helping the third who was rolling around on fire," Mathieson said.
The first of the four fire companies was on the scene in approximately three to four minutes, he said. Eighty-five firefighters were called to the scene, Madigan said.

The fire, which had flames that went through the roof and window of the shops, was not unexpected, Mathieson said.
The shop, according to Mathieson, is part of a business that takes cars that have been involved in wrecks and rebuilds them to sell.
Mathieson said that neighbors have been concerned about the shop for some time.
"We've waited for something like this. It's not unexpected. We've been smelling paint fumes for some time. We've had the police out here 30 to 40 times in the last eight months," he said.
However, Mathieson said he did not smell paint before this fire.
Madigan also said the fire was not not caused by paint.

Committee to ban A.S. funds for booze

"The budget committee was also alerted to this possible problem by the number of alcohol-related lawsuits that have been filed against fraternities and sororities nationwide," she said.
Groups that currently use A.S. funds for alcohol include the program board and the art gallery, said Gregg Rose, A.S. executive assistant.
"Once a month the art gallery has openings at which wine and beer are served," said Rose.
However, Ted Gehrke, A.S. program board adviser, said the board doesn't use A.S. funds to buy alcohol.
"The funds for receptions come from Student Union board funds," he said.
But Gehrke said that the program board occasionally uses A.S. funds to buy alcohol for bands that perform.
"Some groups require that alcohol be put in their dressing room," Gehrke said. The stipulation may "very well hurt" the program board's ability to bring in bands, he said.
However, he did point out that the alcohol provided is usually only about a case and a half of beer and a bottle of wine.
"When we put on the Berlin concert we were required to use the Civic Auditorium's catering. We spent $1,000 on food and beverages of which only about $50 was for alcohol," he said.
The idea to keep A.S. funds from being used to buy alcohol is not new. Jean Lenart, A.S. business office administrator, said that a similar measure was

Teri Cooper
... sponsored programs director taken in the 1960s and 1970s.
Because stores were not as computerized as they are now, groups were able to get around the stipulation, Lenart said.
"They would go to the grocery stores where the receipts would only have the prices," she said. Today, receipts list the item purchased.
If the stipulation is approved, requests would be denied as soon as their requests reach the A.S. business office, Cooper said.
In order to have the stipulation waived, the group would need a two-thirds vote of the A.S. board of directors, Cooper said.
Punishment for groups that were to illegally use the A.S. funds for alcohol has not been set, she said.

Student challenges frog dissection order

VICTORVILLE (AP) — Many students might prefer to avoid dissecting frogs in their biology classes, but how many are prepared to make a federal case of it?
Jennifer Graham is, and she has the backing of the Humane Society of the United States in her battle with school officials who say she must either cut up a frog or leave class.
The 15-year-old vegetarian and her lawyers have failed to persuade the Victor Valley High School principal to let Graham learn frog anatomy from a model or computer program instead of the real thing.
They're scheduled to take their case to the school board later this month, and failing that, they're prepared to file a federal lawsuit, said O.J. "Joe" Ramsey, the Sacramento attorney representing Graham free of charge.

Principal Julian Weaver did not return calls Monday seeking comment.
"The thing with this dissection is that I'm not squeamish or emotional," Graham said Friday. "I'm not like that at all. I could sit there and watch them if I wanted to, but I don't want to have any part in it."
She said she objects to the raising of captive animals, either for food or for research that involves unnecessarily killing or maiming. Graham said she became a vegetarian at age 10 under the guidance of her mother, who adheres to the principles of the Theosophical Society, a group that incorporates Christian, Hindu and Buddhist thinking.
Ramsey maintains that the First Amendment protects Graham's moral beliefs.

Pulitzer awarded to SJSU alum

Born in Laramie, Wyo., Komenich grew up in Manteca. After graduating from SJSU, he went to work at the Contra Costa Times in 1979. He had worked at his hometown Manteca Bulletin prior to coming to SJSU.
In 1983, he began working at the Examiner.
Along with the Pulitzer, Komenich has twice won Photographer of the Year honors from the San Francisco Bay Area Press Photographers' Association, Swan said.
Sigma Delta Chi, the Society of Professional Journalists, recently awarded Komenich the Distinguished Service Award for News Photography, Swan said.
One of Komenich's first professional clips after graduating was a photograph that was printed in Life magazine.
"The thing I remember telling (Komenich) is, 'Don't expect to make Life magazine your first month out (of school),' " Swan said. "And sure enough he did."
Komenich is the second Spartan Daily photographer to win the Pulitzer.

More than 40 issues unresolved

University system, who have been with out a contract since June, to work out an agreement with the chancellor's office.
But because the findings of the report are not binding, they may only serve as a basis for future negotiations, said Jacob Samit, CSU vice chancellor and chief negotiator for the 19-campus system.
In addition to more than 40 unresolved issues that still separate the two parties, each side has argued that the other has presented distorted and misrepresented facts to back up its position.
"The CFA's analysis is so flawed that it could be seen as bordering on purposeful misrepresentation," Tom C. Stickel was quoted as saying in the newsletter CSU Stateline. Stickel is chair of the CSU Board of Trustees Committee on Collective Bargaining.
"We stand behind every fact we've ever presented and the quality of our research," said CFA General Manager Ed Purcell.
"We call (the CSU Stateline) the State-lie," said Scott Rice, SJSU English professor and chapter president of CFA.
The CFA has been doing an aggressive job of keeping the California Legislature informed of the progress of the talks and some of CSU's practices they see as unfair, Rice has said.
If the CSU refuses to budge on key issues after the fact finder's report is issued, there will be a "political price to pay in Sacramento," he said.
Samit said he is optimistic about the report solving the problems or serving as a basis for future negotiations.
The report hasn't been issued yet because fact finder Phillip Tamoush, an arbitrator called in to help settle the dispute, is making a very serious effort to resolve the issues, Samit said.

The contract talks have not been entirely unproductive. Some issues have been resolved while the two sides have been negotiating.
An across-the-board 6.8 percent salary increase for CSU faculty members retroactive to July 1 and the continuation of the Faculty Early Retirement Program for most faculty have been granted by the CSU trustees.
Among the unresolved issues are university presidential power as it relates to faculty governance, the faculty merit performance award, the growing number of temporary faculty and the lack of an enforceable non-discrimination clause in the contract.
The fact finder was appointed in February to help settle the more than 40 unresolved issues between the two sides. He completed his hearings last month and his report will suggest possible solutions.
A fact finder, a professional arbitrator who has the added power to call hearings to gather information, was called in after other steps in the negotiations failed.
The two sides have been trying to hammer out a contract for the CSU faculty, represented by the California Faculty Association for over a year.
Contract negotiations broke down last spring and the mediator appointed thereafter was declared ineffective last December.
If the two parties remain deadlocked after the report is issued, CSU Chancellor W. Ann Reynolds can ultimately impose a settlement, Samit said.

Business Majors, Learn About Global Business Experience Offered By U.S. Navy Supply Corps

You have used four critical years of your life preparing for a career in business. Now you must decide which career path you will follow.
If your career path is like that of most business students, you will go directly from campus to corporation. However, that path may not be best for you. Before making your decision, you should compare typical, entry-level corporate positions to becoming a business professional in the Navy Supply Corps.
Some of the most successful business and financial executives in the nation give credit to business experience in the Supply Corps as a major factor in their success. They include:
• James D. Robinson III, Chairman American Express
• Edward Carlson, former Chairman/CEO of UAL Inc.
• William Marriott, Chairman of Marriott Corp.
• James Ketelson, CEO of Tenneco Inc.
• Robert I. Stewart, President Liberty National Life Ins. Co.
• John J. Pruis, Vice President corporate relations Ball Corp.
This is a small part of a list that could be extended to include other corporate executives, a U.S. cabinet officer, ambassadors, and other high-ranking government officials.

Supply Corps officers don't command ships or gun batteries.
Officers in the Navy Supply Corps operate one of the largest and most complex business operations on the globe. This elite group makes up the business professionals of the Navy.
Two Career Possibilities
If you are accepted for a commission in the Navy, career possibilities to you include:
1. The Supply Corps as a career.
2. Return to a civilian position after a tour of two to four years. This option means you would be trained for positions which otherwise would never be offered to you.
Benefits of Supply Corps experience include: learning to work with people, development of a global perspective, management techniques, postgraduate education in business comparable to an MBA, and competitive real income.
Business students may find out if they qualify to join the elite business professionals in the Supply Corps by attending a career-planning presentation entitled "The United States Navy Supply Corps. The Business Professionals of the Navy."
This presentation will be conducted by LT Scott Bailey one time only this semester at 1 p.m. Wednesday, April 22, in the Montalvo Room, Student Union.

Former theater arts prof Davee dies

By Larry Aragon
Daily staff writer

Paul W. Davee, who taught acting and direction at SJSU from 1957 to 1978, died of an illness April 14.

Private services for the retired SJSU Theatre Arts Department professor are scheduled to begin at 2 p.m. today at the Santa Barbara Cemetery.

Born in Helena, Mont., Davee, 71, produced more than 100 plays in his career, directing 34 at SJSU, said Kenneth Dorst, Theatre Arts Department professor and long-time friend.

Dorst said he first worked with Davee in 1957 on the play "Angel Street." "It was really a joy to work with a director who thoroughly believed in the play."

The shows Davee has directed were well-received by both the public and the critics, Dorst said.

"He was a very quiet, methodical, friendly instructor who was well-liked by all of his students," Dorst said.

Davee earned his bachelor's degree at River Falls State Teachers College in Wisconsin and his master's degree and Ph. D. at the State University of Iowa.

He taught in Montana's public schools from 1935 to 1937, at Montana State University from 1939 to 1940, at Montana's Christian College from 1940 to 1943, at the University of Iowa from 1946 to 1953 and Florida State University from 1953 to 1957.

Davee also served as a Navy lieutenant at Okinawa and Iwo Jima during World War II.

Davee is survived by his wife, Peggy, his son, Steven, his daughter, Wendy and grandson, Paul.

A.S. gives $4,800 in allocations

By David Barry
Daily staff writer

More than $4,800 was allocated to three groups by the Associated Students Board of Directors at the April 8 meeting.

The Chicana Alliance, a group which has only been on campus since January, was allocated $2,155 to put on a three-day celebration of Cinco de Mayo. The celebration is slated for May 4-6, said former A.S. Controller Gabriel Miramontes who represented the all-female group.

American Association of Airport Executives was allocated a total of $2,000 in the form of a $1,000 direct allocation and a $1,000 underwrite which is due at the end of the fall 1987 semester. The money will be used to put on a mini-conference for professionals and students involved or interested in the airline industry.

A total of $410 was given to Akbayan to put on a cultural program which will focus on the three regions of the Philippines.

The special allocations fund, which provided the money, now has $2,200 left in it, A.S. Controller Robert Cruz said.

Because special allocations is finished for the year, unused money will be returned to the general A.S. fund.

Only one group this semester, Outspoken, which is attempting to distribute a magazine, was denied its request by special allocations. The main reason given was that there would be no continuity since the group was moving off-campus next semester.

Earlier this semester, the Turkish Folklore and Tourism Club also had its request of $1,348 denied but that was the result of a veto by A.S. President Tom Boothe.

All three groups, which appeared Wednesday, had little trouble getting their requests approved but they would have liked more.

The Chicana Alliance had originally put in a request for $2,455. But special allocations, in its April 6 meeting, cut that amount to $2,155.

"The amount is flexible and will help out," Miramontes said.

The Chicana Alliance is not the first group to be funded for the Cinco de Mayo celebration. Last year, El Concilio was allocated $2,125 for the event. In 1985 and 1984, the A.S. allocated $2,800 and $1,800 to other groups, Miramontes said.

"It's just like the money that is used for Greek Week, Homecoming, Black History Month, and Asian Spring Festival," he said.

This year's event is spanning three days, Miramontes said. In previous years, the event was held on one day — Program Adjustment Day. The money will be used for operating expenses, publicity and programs.

The Airline Executives had originally requested $4,925 before special allocations reduced the amount.

The October conference, which would be a first for the group, is aimed at enabling aeronautics, marketing, business and engineering students to further their education and make contacts.

Similar conferences are also held at the University of California at Berkeley and in North Dakota, said club representative Jennifer Donohue.

Donohue said she was pleased that the A.S. voted 11-0 to fund the group.

"It was great to see the A.S. give their unanimous support," she said. However, the lowered amount may keep the group, which wanted to bring in 55 professionals, from providing air fare and hotel accommodations for them as originally intended, said Donohue.

Now the group will stage a publicity campaign, through fliers, to get the necessary professionals to attend.

The other group to get money was Akbayan, which had requested an allocation of $560.

The $410 will be used to put on a show, which will focus on the three major regions of the Philippines — Luzon, Mindanao and the Visayas.

At the special allocation meeting, the India Students Association was allocated $200 for a program of Indian classical music.

"It's just like the money that is used for Greek Week, Homecoming, (and) Black History Month."

A.S. president and committee both want trust fund in budget

By David Barry
Daily staff writer

Both the Associated Students Budget Committee and A.S. President Tom Boothe agree that a $50,000 trust fund should be a part of the 1987-88 A.S. budget.

The trust fund, along with the rest of the A.S. budget, will be decided at the next A.S. board of directors meeting scheduled for Wednesday.

The fund, which would be a first for the A.S., "is designed to provide long-term fiscal solvency of the A.S. budget," according to the fund's definition, written by Larry Rose, an associate professor of accounting and finance and a member of the budget committee.

It would enable the board to have emergency reserves when needed, Boothe said.

One reason for Rose's proposal is to keep student fees where they are, said Monica Cushing, A.S. director of business affairs and chairwoman of the budget committee.

Another reason is the continued increase in groups asking for money, Cushing said.

"We had six new groups this year that required more money," she said. "It's another way to satisfy the students."

The proposed repeal of last year's $8 student association fee increase,

"We had six new groups this year that required more money. It's another way to satisfy the students."

— Monica Cushing,
A.S. director of business affairs which appeared on the March 26 and 27 A.S. general election ballot, also got the committee interested in the fund.

"The repeal was a scare," said Cushing. "We want something in case the fee is ever cut."

The proposed fund was set up after every single group had been allocated funds in their budget, said Cushing.

"We're not going to cut anyone out," said Cushing. "Those figures were already decided on."

The money, if approved, would be put into "risk free accounts," said Teri Cooper, budget committee member and A.S. director of sponsored programs.

"We're not going to invest in the stock market or in gold," Cooper said.

The money could not be used for "legislative, executive or normal operating expenses," according to the A.S. trust policy. Interest on the account also can't be touched by the A.S. board for five years.

However, the budget committee and Boothe, who have to each submit a budget, have differing proposals on how the trust fund should be implemented.

The committee would like the fund to be entirely in the Associated Students general fund, said Cushing.

Under Boothe's plan, the fund would be allotted to two accounts, the general fund account and the Instructionally Related Activities account.

At the April 8 meeting, Boothe said he wants the fund separated so it will not go against the fee initiative, which was passed in a special May 1986 election.

The initiative stated that student fees would be raised by $8 a semester and that the IRA account would be at least 30 percent of fee revenues.

The trust fund being proposed by the budget committee would cause the IRA account to be cut to 27.6 percent.

This would violate what the Responsible Alliance party promised to do in its 1986 party platform, said Boothe, who ran on the REAL ticket in 1986 and 1987.

The platform stated the party would "uphold the results of student elections. Students passed initiatives that will receive the full support of the REAL Party in both letter and spirit. We honor the students' votes."

"It would be immoral," Boothe said at the meeting.

The election board reached this figure as a sound "fiscal decision," not as a "political organization," Cooper said.

"I don't believe it can be done," Boothe said. "It would jeopardize IRA."

Boothe also said he believes that the budget committee's proposal is too limited.

It stipulates that 30 percent of the proposed budget committee trust fund would go to the IRA, he said.

"It's a question of flexibility," Boothe said. "His proposed trust fund would have stipulations but it would not state where the money would have to go."

SJSU would not be the first A.S. in the California State University system to have such a fund, Cooper said. San Diego State's A.S. currently has a trust fund that is at $1.5 million.

Galileo often contemplated whether Löwenbräu's formula for the best way in the world to brew beer was also the best way in the universe.

© 1987 Miller Brewing Co. Milwaukee, WI

In a little known footnote to Galileo's busy career as inventor, physicist, and astronomer, it was also discovered that he was an expert on beer and its relationships to the universe. "The Madman," as Galileo was known to friends, scientifically concluded during in-depth taste tests that Löwenbräu's Bavarian supervision, plus the richness of Bavarian hops brewed fresh and smooth, was truly the best way in the world to brew beer.

Tragically, Galileo's findings were destroyed in what is now known as the "Big Löwenbräu Bash of 1593" at which his soon-to-be-former girlfriend, Sophie, spilled beer all over the records. Luckily, by conducting your own taste tests with Löwenbräu today, you'll realize what Galileo did hundreds of years ago... it's the best way in the world to brew beer.

SJSU coaches expressed support and concern for newly appointed Intercollegiate Athletics Director Randy Hoffman at a recent meeting.

"He appeared to be a very impressive fellow," football Head Coach Claude Gilbert said. "He seemed open and direct."

Hoffman comes from the University of Maryland and is slated to begin his SJSU career on May 1.

The union representing the employees of the Associated Students is considering legal action against the A.S. because of delays in contract negotiations.

The employees joined the International Brotherhood of Painters and Allied Trade Unions in September and have still not worked out or signed a contract with the A.S., said Glenn Woodhouse, a business agent with the union.

If the delay continues, the union will file an "unfair labor practice" complaint, Woodhouse said.

Roger Wert, A.S. vice president and in charge of negotiations said this would not be necessary, because the contract has been reviewed by the A.S. and will likely be returned soon to the employees for their approval.

The Spartan Foundation is planning to kick off its first $1 million fundraising drive Thursday.

As for his own policy Dr. Newmann has been known to give grades of "unsatisfactory" to any of his students who neglect exams and papers to engage in social or political protest.

Now there's more than one way to get through college.

If you want to get ahead in college, it helps if you choose a brilliant roommate. Like a Macintosh™ personal computer. And now there are two models from which you can choose.

First, there's the Macintosh Plus—now widely accepted by students at colleges and universities all across the country.

It comes with one 800K disk drive and a full megabyte of memory (which is expandable to four).

For those of you who need even more power, there's the Macintosh SE.

It comes with all of the above. As well as a built-in 20-megabyte hard disk, for storing up to 10,000 pages. Or if you prefer, you can add a second built-in 800K floppy drive.

The SE also gives you a choice of two new keyboards, one with function keys for special applications.

And it has an internal expansion slot so you can add new power without performing major surgery. Like a card that lets you share information over a campus-wide network. Or another that lets you run MS-DOS programs.

With either Macintosh, you'll be able to take advantage of the latest, most advanced software.

Like idea processors that outline your thoughts. Word processors for writing, editing and checking your spelling. And communications programs that give you 24-hour access to valuable information.

So no matter which model you decide on—you'll be able to work much faster, better and smarter.

No two ways about it.

The power to be your best.
